25,000 JEWEL ROBBERY.

Russian Count's Loss."

DARING THAIR CRIME.

The Paris Strete was advised on the morning of July 3 by the Procurator of the Republic at Boulogne that Court Muravieff was, the previous day, on landing from the Channel steamer Engadine at Calais, rubbed of a despatch box containing jewels of the value of £5,000; £400" in cash, and many important papers. Count Muraviell had placed the box in a first-class compartmont of the Paris express, and when he returned after a short absence the box had disappeared. The rubber is suspected to be a young man of between twenty-five and thirty, who was seen by several people walking up and down in front of the Count's compartment. A description of hi appearance has been circulated widely, and a warrant issued for his arrest.

Two commissaries of the Sureté Gépétale have left London, and another for Brussels, where it is believed that the thief may have taken refuge, and inquiries are being strenuously made in all quarters, so far, without result. -- Count Muravieff has com? niunicated the contents of the stolen despatch box to the authorities. It contained, in addition to a number of French and Italian bankmotes, segeral personal documents of great importance, and valueble jewellery, including two very large black pearls valued at £1,000, a large brilliant incunted on platinum, worth £400, a jewelled eighrette cano, half a dozen tieplus of a total value of over £500, several sets of pearl studs, and a number of wrist

A SMART THEFT.

The Count believes the robbery to have been the work of a gang who were well informed as to his movements, and had probably shadowed him from London across the Chappel, waiting for a favourable opportunity to bring off their coup. The robber can only have had a few seconds in which to act. The Count, after taking h's place in a compartment of the express, himself placed the despatch box on the Heat while the porter placed two other parcels on the rack. The Count then sent his valet along the train to engage a table in the prestaurant car and himself, after asking an official to keep an eye on his compartment, strolled down the platform to buy a newspaper. When he returned in a few moments the box had disappeared. The only definite information he received was from a traveller in the same carriage, who said that he had seen a man who had been standing at the far end of the corridor for some time enter the compartment the moment after the Count had left it. . He had a black bag in his hand. With this valuable ciue the Count continued his inquiries. Several other travellers and officials remembered having noticed the the man with the black beg, and from their indications the police have been able to obtain a pretty complete idea of the suspected man's dress and appear nee. The wanted man is of middle height, wi h dark auburn hair and moustache, and was wearing a soft feit hat, dark grey alpaca jacket, and khaki trousers. He was of medium build, and appeared to be under Count Nicolas Muravieff, the victim of

A tragic story of splendid chivalry, of a British Army officer's determination to undergo penal servitude rather than defend himself at his wife's expense, although she was proved guilty, is told in a document which has just been sens to all members of Parliament by trying to secure a re-hearing of the enter in order to vindicate the officer's It is the story of Lieutenant Coal Aylmer Cameron, of the Royal Artillery, and his wife, who were both convicted in 1911 of irandulently claiming £8,500 insurance on a pearl Lieutchant Cameron, whose futherwon the V.C. in the Indian Mutiny and whose grandfather lought in the Guards at Waterloo, refused to go into the witness box at the trial to prove his non-complicity in the frond for fear of making his wife's case worse. Only another of his many acts of devotion.

A few weeks after bearing awful news of its failure, I was demented with grief. On sending for my husband's counsel to find out why it had been refused, he could not explain, but added to that cruel news by informing me first of all that had my husband defended himself his innocence would have been proved, but at my expense, and this he refused to do at any price. All this I heard on being moved in here in a dying condition, and the agony of mind was twenty times harder to bear than the physical sufferings. Also about that time T was told I was handed over to Mother.

The intense gratifude and relief I experienced on bearing this news I can't describe; nor can I ever express what absolutely intermified torture of mind I went through for my dear noble young husband who was left there to suffer alone for what he could never even have dreamed of, as he is, and always has been, the would of

THE SARAVEJO MURDERS.

DRAMATIC CONTESSION OF THE ASSASSIN.

An Anarchist for Years.

The following account has been received from Sarajevo of the examination of the murderer Princip by the Jugo d'Instruction. The assessin is a small dark man, with sunken eyes, and it is evident that he is auffering from tuberculosis. His head is bandaged. The expression of his face is quiet, but his eyes gleam. He said to the examining judge:

"I am guilty. I came here with the object of perpetrating the attempt. was not under foreign influence. When attended the fourth class of the Sarajevo Gymnasium I had already read Anarchistical books and Anarchism was my passion. This passion I have now been able to satisfy at last. I have read various books about Anarchists and the news given by the papers about all kinds of attempts, and I am convinced that there is nothing better in the world than to be an assassin. I made up my mind to kill one of the heads of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy. have succeeded at last.

"At the end of May of this year I heard in Belgrade that the Heir to the Throne was coming to Sarajevo in the month of July. I determined to utilise the occasion of for the perpetration of my plans. I took lodgings with my friend and companion, Danie Illic, a former board school teacher. Komitadji in Belgrade presented me with the revolver and the certridges, but I id not tell him my intentions. On the lay of the attampt I did not think much but I was quite determined to abide by my intention. I wanted to make the attempt as the automobile drove to the town ball, but as meanwhile another man flung a bomb l changed my plan, and I decided to swait Cable Address. "Sachsola." the return. As the automobils returned from the town hall I caught sight of the Heir to the Throne. By him sat a lady, and at the first moment I wanted to desist on account of her presence. Immediately afterwards, however, I changed my mind, and my intention was reinforced by the idea of killing the lady too. I began to shoot as the automobile turned the corner, and could not see whether I had attained my object or not. I could not see, as, I was immediately seized and hit by everybody.

" I do not repent my dead. I am con cent that I have carried out my original intention. With the attempt which was made just before mine I have nothing in common. As I heard the explosion of the bomb I thought to mys If, Really there are people who feel and think just like me. That strengthened me in my decision." ARCHEI-HOP'S STATEMENT.

Some remarkable utterances were delivered to day by Archbishop Stabler, of arajevo, who said: "The outrage is the consequence of historic davelopment. It is no simple accident that it was committed on the anniversary of the battle of Ameel field, for all the Servina movements on untro-Hungarian soil always occur on this day or thereabouts. It is quite certain that if the Archduke and his wife had not been murdered on the .pot where the catastrophe happened, they would have been the objects I another attempt on the same day, for the conspirators would have found another opportunity of carrying out their dreadful olan. All Sarajevo was full of plotters, who were ready to remove the heir to the throne from their way."

The Archbishop also says that bombs were found even in the trees along the route over which the Archduke passed. This information was confirmed by the THE BANK'S CIROULAR LETTERS President of the Bosnian Diet, who adds The Heir to the Throne was surround- LAKIS

ed by more than ten conspirators, who and some with bombs. If Princip's shots had failed, some seconds later a second con-pirator would have fired again. Moreover, a bomb was found smong the branches of a tree on the road over which the Archducal pair drove. The murderers had spun a net from which the Archduke could not excape. In case, however, he managed to evade all the conspirators on the streets, a bomb attempt was planned to take place in the Palace. There was to be a binquet there on Sunday at noon. Under the table two bombs, actuated by clockwork, were bidden. In the chimney of the dining room there was also a bomb with clockwork."

The rights of the dog do not appear to be grasped by railway officials. Isn't he entitled to a seat?" inquired a lady travellar on one of the great systems. "I have bought a ticket for him," she added. "Yes," madam, said the guard politely, " so long as he does not put his feet upon the cushions."

A more amusing labour trouble could pardly be imagined than the atrike which recently occurred at Swanley, the centre Typhoon union, whose headquarters are at New castle-on-Tyne, launched a propagands which included a demand for a minimum wage of 24s. a week for adults. But the men who can earn it get more than that already in piece-work. Similarly, a minimum wage of Sa. a week was demanded for boys, who make from 10s. to 12s.

close up, and Duke Eluniphreys last.

Another delightful afternoon has been spent amid the cool shades of the July Course at Newmarket, The victory of Earl Cadegan's good horse. The Curragh, in the Princess of Wales's Stakes did not discount the pleasure of the occasion for many people. Rather did he enhance it for them, as the winner of the Jubiles Stakes was a great popular fancy, though it was always possible to back him, at a fair price. I call even money a fair price in the circumstances. Most peoplrather expected him to start at a shade of odds on. After all his chance was undeniable, judging by his admirable record since winning the Babraham Plate here in the spring. The opposition was moderate, for as I had previously pointed out he was meeting Brakespear on 51b, better than the weight-for-age terms. Some people concluded from his failure in the Royal Hunt Cup that he was probably going off, but there is Surely a vast, difference between, that course at Ascot, which has to be covered at breakneck pace in a big field, and this mile and a half in a small field. The Currigh is certainly better suited by a mile and a half than the Hunt Cup distance, and, therefore, it did seem good business to have the chance of taking even money about him to-day.

· Clark rode of quet, capable, and confident ruce on him, and though the judge declared that he only beat his Majesty's Brakespear by a neck, it is quite cer- Lo tain that the winner was not all out. Protect He won cleverly, if not comfortably. . Styx I was at the end of the plantation to "see the race and as they approached me Cantilever was, going an extraordinarily Pherville good style, which was indeed surprising, Pistolet for he' went down to the post in horrible fashion. Almost immediately after they | Monsquet had got to where the rails begin, Can- Manche tillorer collapsed in a few strides, and though a besten horse, the jockey pulled out his whip. I'suspect that his wind is not as sound as it might be. Sun Yat could not stay, but Emkespear ran gamely and better than I expected. OUTBREAK OF WAR.

Austria has declared war against Servin. This is the news just announced-an announcement seemed inevitable in view of Austria's demands and her attitude towards Servia's reply. The demands, to most people, doubtless savoured strongly, of tyranny, such tyranny as can always be wielded by the big over the weak when the bigger is so minded, and the reply doubtless appeared to most people to be as far as any seifrespecting Government would commit themselves. Some of the conditions were of such a nature that almost seems that they were framed primarily for the purpose of

After the alterations had be b completed, another start was made at three we ock, this time for a turn to windward out in the Channel.
